

Estill County judge laments cost of jail, other strains on budget

Taylor questions how long court can continue to pay escalating costs

By LISA BICKNELL

CV&T News Editor

Estill County Judge-executive Wallace Taylor said if jail expenses continue to climb, they will bankrupt the county in a few months.

As a list of appropriations and intrafund transfers were approved, the court again reluctantly agreed to pay the intrafund transfer from the general to jail fund, which this month totaled $109,000.

"Fellows, we cannot afford to continue to do that," Taylor told the court. "We have to do something... we will be bankrupt in a few months at this rate."

When Magistrate Gerald Rader asked exactly what the funds are going for, Taylor said that overtime and food purchases were "out of control." He also said it cost $40,000 to house inmates out of county last month.

Treasurer Ann Rodgers read from a statement that in the first quarter of the fiscal year the jail cost $280,000.

Taylor said, "At this rate, it will be more than a million in a year," adding that $800,000 was budgeted for the jail for the year.

"The jail fund costs more than the road fund," he said.

In his monthly fire department report, Estill County Fire Chief Derrick Muncie said the county has been awarded 500 smoke detectors to go into the homes of second graders through an AFG grant.

Muncie also mentioned that three firemen in full turnout gear will be a part of the River City Players' Christmas play.

In his monthly address, Taylor said the county has entered into an agreement with Madison County to build a 70 feet bridge at Knob Lick for $157,000.

Shelter meeting reveals need, lots of interest

By LISA BICKNELL

CV&T News Editor

Judging by the number of people who came to the courthouse last Thursday night, there is plenty of interest and concern in providing a homeless/domestic abuse shelter for those who might not have a warm place to stay in Estill County.

After the little courtroom filled up, the group moved upstairs and nearly filled the large courtroom.

And judging from the remarks of those leading the push for a shelter, the need is very real.

Members of the board of Helping Hands Outreach Ministry spoke to the crowd about those needs.

Tom Kirby led the meeting and will be helping with strategic planning of the project.

He introduced Debbie

Rison, founder and CEO of Helping Hands, who said she has become more aware of the great need for food, clothing, and places for some to sleep through the work she does with the ministry.

Rison said "more than a 100" people, including families, senior citizens and veterans, have been identified as not having a home in Estill County.

She said homelessness

does not necessarily mean that they live on the street, but that they are dependent on family members or friends to provide shelter, that they are living in a hotel or a campground, or that they are awaiting foster care. In some cases, she said, people are simply abandoned at the hospital.

Rison also said the shelter outreach will be a faith-based one.

works for Kentucky River Foothills as a Family Service Specialist with Head Start. She said, according to the 2012-13 census, there are 91 children in grades 0-12 that don't have a home to call their own.

McKinney moved here from southern California eight years ago and said she was "just amazed" that so many people who have

A crowd gathered on Thursday, November 13 at the courthouse to discuss the need for a homeless/domestic abuse shelter in Estill County. Aaron Hackworth, at right, said it will require sacrifice to operate such a shelter. Organizers said about 100 people are estimated to be homeless in Estill County.

Arrest made in jewelry theft

An Irvine man has been arrested for burglarizing a local pawn shop and making off with a cabinet full of jewelry.

Tommy G. Bowling, 36, of 719 Broadway, was arrested on November 11 for the theft.

On October 16, the owner of Square Deal Pawn Shop, Keith Tipton, told the sheriff's department that a large amount of jewelry had been taken from his shop on Richmond Road.

The records stating who had brought the jewelry in were also taken, so police made a plea for help from the public.

On November 11, sheriff's deputy Russell "Doc" Morris made an arrest in the case.

Bowling admitted to the deputy and Detective

Zach Thompson that he had stolen jewelry in his possession that came from Square Deal Pawn shop.

According to the police report, Bowling pawned and sold the jewelry at several stores.

Bowling, a convicted felon, also gave the probation and parole staff permission to search his home at 719 Broadway.

Probation and parole staff found a 22 caliber Phoenix Arms handgun in Bowling's bedroom.

He has been charged with possession of a handgun by a convicted felon, and receiving stolen property, under $10,000.

Bowling is scheduled to be in court on November 19, 2014 for a preliminary hearing.

for conducting a pet food drive. They collected 313 pounds of dog food, 32 cans of dog food, nine dog bowls, three scoops, four bottles of shampoo, 20 towels, five boxes of dog treats, three bags of puppy pads, and 140 pounds of cat litter. The supplies were donated to Estill and Clark County shelters, and Linda Grimes’ veterinarian practice. The girls also helped four local families.

Nancy Held and her brother Charles Williams attended the meeting and requested the county to close a section of Burton Williams Road deeded to the county by their grandfather. Judge Taylor said for the transaction to be legal procedures have to be followed. Signs must be posted, there must be a public hearing in 30 days, and the section of road must be measured.

Judge Taylor said there were 31 applicants for the temporary road department positions. He recommended that Gary Scott Marshall, Stanley Ray “Jigs” Kelley, and Autumn Reed be hired by the court. The court approved their hiring.

Taylor also recommended Sonya Gail Sutton be hired for the part-time animal shelter position and the court approved.

The court sought and received permission to advertise to receive bids for monitors and defibrillators for Emergency Management Services.

Judge Taylor suggested the county check into installing a defibrillator at the courthouse.

The court reviewed pricing on the core drilling required for the new CSEPP communication tower. The only bid was accepted. It was for $3900.81.

Three bids for an environmental study were considered, also for the tower site. Judge Taylor was reluctant to accept any of the bids, because he thought the amount to conduct a study on a 20x20 foot square plot of land too expensive. The cheapest bid went to Copperhead Environmental services for $7,200.

Taylor said, “I agree reluctantly, and I will pay no more than that.”

Fred Rogers said FEMA requires that the site be studied to make sure there are no Native American burial mounds on site. He said letters must be sent to all the tribes in the country asking if they have relatives buried there. Part of the environmental study is to check the air space also.

A resurfacing agreement was passed to use $250,000 in discretionary monies received by Magistrates Johnson and Young. Roads to be repaved include .2 miles on Clark Road, .8 miles on Substation Road, .328 on Station Camp, .5 at Crooked Creek, .3 at Candy Lane, .1 at Beechwood Drive, .2 at Quail Run, .5 at Church House Hill, .045 at Jackson Cemetery, .24 at Laurie Drive, and .5 at Pitts Road.

Money from a flex fund in the amount of $159,160 was approved for road funds also, but Taylor said there is no contract yet.

The 2014-15 budget was amended for the amount of $84,378.65 in adjustments over the year.

Appropriations and intrafund transfers were approved, and the court again reluctantly agreed to pay the intrafund transfer from the general to jail fund totaling $109,000.

Taylor also expressed a reluctance to the idea of paying White and Associates to conduct an audit of county government at an estimated cost of $20,000.

Treasurer Rogers said the state has such a backlog on audits that they can’t do them, and they recommended the county hire a private auditor. She said White and Associates had priced an audit or $20,000.

Rogers said she would make more phone calls to see if she can find someone to do the audit cheaper.

always lived here did not seem appreciative of the natural beauty of the area. She has since figured out that they are “burdened with all the negativity” from addiction and poverty.

She went on to speak of “the vision” that includes developing a shelter in phases.

“We want to provide resources and support people,”she said, “not just give a handout.”

The first stage Helping Hands is proposing is an emergency shelter for women and children, which would include a kitchen, a reception area, sleeping areas, and common areas for children to play.

She said other shelters in other counties can usually find a place for men or women to stay, but there is often no place for women with children to go, as is so often the need in domestic violence situations.

The second stage of initial planning would be to develop an actual homeless shelter with separate living areas for men and for women.

The third stage would include transitional housing for families six months to a year and would help provide them with resources for overcoming substance abuse and teach them job skills.

“The vision,” said McKinney, “is to create partnerships and to offer resources and skills.”

Rick Prewitt told those gathered that he and his son had spent some time helping out at the Catholic Action Center and the Community Inn in Lexington.

He quoted Mother Teresa, who said, “Calcuttas are everywhere.”

Wallace Taylor, County Judge-executive also attended the meeting and said, “I see so many families they’ve (Helping Hands) touched by providing food and clothing.”

“There will be “nay-sayers,” he said, “but this is going to happen. We’re going to move forward.”

“Sometimes we are too busy,” Taylor went on. “The church is outside the doors.”

Aaron Hackworth, pastor of Revival Tabernacle beside the Opportunity Store, said he has tried opening a food bank and a clothing bank without much success, but he recently met Debbie and decided to join forces with Helping Hands.

“There is no need to reinvent the wheel,” he said.

He spoke of “the cause,” but said every cause requires a sacrifice.

“A shelter might mess up my view, take up my time, or my money,” he said, “but we have to go the distance to make sure people have what they need.”

Toward the end of the meeting, guests were invited to ask questions.

One man wondered if a new building would be built, or if an existing one could be used.

“We have options, but not a lot of details yet,” said McKinney.

Sharon Snowden, a resident of Ravenna, said she had heard that the ministry is looking at the property across from the park in Ravenna that once housed the recycling center. She said some citizens have concerns about locating it across from the park where children play.

Taylor said the old recycling center in Ravenna is being looked at as a site for storage for Helping Hands and possibly a shelter.

McKinney said there would be a “security mechanism” to keep victims safe.

Organizers also said a location outside of town, perhaps a house where a victim’s whereabouts could remain a secret, is another option.

Darlene Thomas, Executive Director of GreenHouse17, a 32-bed shelter with an outreach to 17 counties, for 25 years, spoke up from the audience.

She said she was “very inspired” by the number of people who turned out for the meeting.

“This is what I believe in, this is my purpose,” she said, noting that she has worked for GreenHouse17 for 25 years. She said the organization has just been approved for funds to provide the “Green Dot program” in area schools, and it is the only one proven to reduce violence.

Another woman in the audience spoke up and said, “I once was a homeless person. It could be you tomorrow.” She said she once lost everything she had in a flood.

Kirby said the next step in moving forward is to “facilitate the plan.” He said the first strategic planning session will be in the coming weeks.

People were invited to sign up to volunteer or give. Organizers say donations of money are needed, or even a property which could be used as a shelter. Volunteers will eventually be needed to help clean and get everything ready.

Kirby said, “A factory in Madison County has donated $5,000 to the cause already.”

Donations can be sent to Helping Hands Outreach Ministry, at P.O. Box 451, Irvine, Ky. 40336. There is also a website, www.helpinghandsoutreach.net, where donations can be made. Anyone with questions or suggestions may call 606-975-6424.

Community Baby Shower

Parents of children under the age of two and expecting moms and dads were invited to attend a community baby shower at South Irvine Elementary on Thursday night.

Sponsored by the Diabetes Coalition, the shower was started as a new outreach of the community health fair. Several local organizations including the Estill County Health Department, the H.A.N.D.S. program, the Estill County Center for Pregnancy and Parenting, the Extension office and Inter-faith Wellness were present with informational booths for parents to browse. Three guest speakers also presented in short educational sessions. Dr. Ong gave advice for keeping young ones healthy, Jim Thacker spoke about the appropriate use of the emergency room, as well as Project HOME and open enrollment period for Medicaid, and Trooper Tinsley spoke about the proper use and need for carseats. Dinner was provided and several door prizes were awarded. Turnout was good, program organizers said.

If you see it, report it: Help stop poaching

Outdoors enthusiasts who witness any illegal hunting activity are encouraged to report it to the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

"If people have any complaints or see any violations such as trespass or poaching, they are encouraged to call 1-800-25ALERT (1-800-252-5378)," said Hank Patton, director of law enforcement for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife.

Patton explained these calls now go through the Kentucky State Police dispatch system and are then routed to conservation officers in the field.

Poaching a deer, elk or bear is a serious crime in Kentucky. Poachers may be fined up to $1,000 and spend up to a year in jail upon conviction. Violators must also pay restitution costs for the animal poached.

"You can be assessed civil penalties in addition to restitution costs and fines," Patton said. "Poaching a deer, elk, bear, turkey or bobcat in Kentucky is a big deal."

Convicted poachers also forfeit their hunting privileges for as long as 3 years. "Kentucky is a member of the Interstate Wildlife Violators Compact," Patton said. "Loss of hunting privileges in Kentucky results in the loss of privileges in 41 additional states."

Those who witness and report someone poaching an elk may receive an award as well. "We have a program for those who report an elk poacher," said Gabe Jenkins, deer and elk program coordinator for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "They will receive a $1,000 reward upon conviction of the elk poacher."

If you see someone poaching or committing other wildlife violations, don't hesitate to report it. Actions that you take now can make for better hunting for everyone in the future.

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources manages, regulates, enforces and promotes responsible use of all fish and wildlife species, their habitats, public wildlife areas and waterways for the benefit of those resources and for public enjoyment. Kentucky Fish and Wildlife is an agency of the Tourism, Arts and Heritage Cabinet. For more information on the department, visit our website at fw.ky.gov.

Trivialities pale in face of real problems

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

Admittedly, there are frustrations to this job. Printing dates roll around quickly, and we have to throw content on the page in a hurry. I sometimes make mistakes, and that bothers me. However, I attended a meeting last week that put typos and such trivialities in proper perspective. I left the warm comfort of my home to attend the first public meeting about organizing a homeless/domestic abuse shelter here. The comfort of my home was particularly noticeable that night because it was so daggone cold outside. But duty called, and I went to cover the meeting in the courthouse, where several speakers spoke about the need present in this community. I was reminded that there are many folks who don't have a warm comfortable home from which to come and go. For those of us who have always had a place to call home, this fundamental need is hard to imagine. That doesn't make it any less real for those who don't. Many of us make a special effort to be mindful of our blessings during this time of year, and that's all well and good. We should practice an attitude of gratitude. But if our attitude is one of "thank God I'm not in that fix," maybe we ought to re-visit it and consider how we can help the less fortunate. After all, as someone pointed out during the meeting, to whom much is given, much is required. I hope the community can pull together to create a shelter, not only for domestic abuse victims, but a place where people down on their luck can get back on their feet, or possibly, find their footing for the first time. It will take hard work, and sacrifice. All the warm fuzzy feelings of being a do-gooder will likely soon wear off, and while the work will be rewarding at times, it will probably just seem like work the rest of the time. The realities of substance abuse, poverty, and intimate partner violence aren't pretty. But I guess the only way to improve things is to tackle the problems head on. We have to keep in mind any of us could need help ourselves some day. I know there will be hurdles to overcome, but I have no doubt that this community has the heart to take care of it's own. So let's do it.

They work for you.

Citizen Facebook Poll

A large group of people met Thursday night at the courthouse to discuss the development of a homeless/domestic abuse shelter in Estill County. Do you think Estill County needs such a shelter? Why or why not? Do you have suggestions for where it could be located?

Karen N Allen Tevis: Yes. I think the old Hargett Elementary School would make a good one. I have no idea who owns it. It is deteriorating every year it sets empty. Someone should put it to good use. Gary S Means Especially needed with cold weather here. Would be nice if some of the homeless could get help with drug counseling and help obtaining GED's so they can see the satisfaction of setting/obtaining goals and have gainful employment with a feeling of self worth. There's no shame in falling but you don't have to stay down.
Freida Rene' Brinegar: This is a wonderful idea. Faith-based is wonderful. Serving at the shelter in Georgetown not only helps those being served but is rewarding to those who served. I've seen lives changed. Feel welcomed to come see what is being done at the Gathering Place.
Michelle Chandler: I know that Helping Hands is being used by God as the agency to fulfill this great need; therefore, having great trust in my God and the ones in charge, I also know the shelter will be planned in accordance with the highest standards and will be a blessing to our community!
Tom Kirby: I am pro-shelter and believe whole-heartedly in the mission of Helping Hands Outreach Ministry. There are many homeless people in the community and multiple cases of documented domestic violence annually in Estill County. Many more probably do not come forward. endhomelessness. org shares some information clearly demonstrating cost savings in a community by rescuing people from homelessness and restoring them to permanent housing. A shelter is the first step in this process, and it is simply the right thing to do. The old Hargett school keeps surfacing as a potential location but I here there are concerns with mold. For those who believe in the mission, I encourage you to get involved by contacting Helping Hands and offering your time and talent.

Virgil Kevin Edwards: It's a great idea. But there are many challenges that must be overcome not only financially, but logistically as well. There must be many things considered such as standard supplies, type of trained professionals to run the shelter, policies on how long homeless people should stay, drug testing them? Making drug rehab a condition if they test positive? Lawyers for legal protection?
Sharon Hensley:With all the transportation difficulties in our county we definitely need a shelter locally. Even with shelters 20 or more miles away that is too far for most people in need of shelter to travel. As far as location it should be in a safe location to protect the people who go there.
Donna Witt: Working in the Housing industry, I can assure you that this is needed. I hear these stories every day. People who are living in storage bldgs., cars, house hoping & many others. It would be a blessing to have somewhere they could stay while waiting for an available unit. Christian Based is the way to do this. God is the only way to change these type of situations. I'm on board for this & would love to help!! Way to go "Helping Hands"!!!
Paula Hopkins: Because some years back I lived in Irvine and fell to victim of abuse and I and my two sons had to go to an abuse center and it made me feel so lost and alone, being abused, two kids and in a city where u don't know anyone. Yes by all means I think it would be a great thing.

Cassie Willis: I believe that a homeless/ domestic abuse shelter is something that this town does need. People drive through town all the time and see people walking, not giving it a second thought as to why or if they have a home or not. There are more homeless people/abused people who need shelter in Estill County then a lot of people realize. I vote YES!
Jeannie Son: Absolutely. Abusive Relationships happen EVERYWHERE in ever Income Brackett, but a lot of Women,Men, Children have no where to go to be safe from that Abuse so we have the Hargett School and Ravenna Elementary also Empty I believe, Why not make use of them. I know if I were in the situation of Abuse or Homeless or even My Family home were to Burn I would Feel better knowing that I would have somewhere to go. Somewhere I wouldn't be judged or Belittled. It's our Job as a Community to take care of our Neighbors like the one's before us did. I'd love to help in anyway I could.
Teressa Reeves: Yes I do think we should! I don't know how many are homeless on our county but it would also help families if they lost there house to a fire ! And also I think in the shelter there should a store for free stuff as blankets ,clothes,coat's an other things!
If you haven't already, like the Citizen Voice and Times facebook page for your chance to participate in upcoming facebook polls. Thank you to our participants for your input. We had a lot of responses to this question and regret that we can't use them all.

Twenty percent of American children share this statistic

While most Americans will worry about eating too much this holiday season, 16 million of our country's children live in households that struggle to afford food, according to a 2012 report from the United States Department of Agriculture. "We hear about 'food insecurity' quite a bit, especially after the 2008-09 economic crash, but I think most people don't have a clear picture of what that means," says Lois Brandt, a former Peace Corps volunteer and author of "Maddi's Fridge," (www. MaddisFridge.com), a children's picture book that asks the question: what do you do if your best friend's family doesn't have enough food? "Food insecurity means an empty refrigerator. Food insecurity means soda instead of milk. Food insecurity means a child coming to school hungry and unable to focus. Poverty may not look exactly the same in our country as it does in a war-torn region or a developing country, but it is affecting our children and their futures. Sometimes, working parents have to choose between rent and food, medicine and food, or gas and food. Brandt suggests four things you can do to help prevent childhood hunger.

- Support non-profit organizations like Feeding America (www. FeedingAmerica.org).

Previously known as Second Harvest, Feeding America is a national network of food banks that feeds more than 37 million people through food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters. It's the nation's leading organization for countering hunger and educating the public about this crisis. "Public awareness is important," Brandt says. "Many people simply do not know that we're surrounded every day by hungry children."

- Talk to your children about childhood hunger and how they can help. "When I was a child I opened my best friend's refrigerator to get a snack and was shocked to see it held almost nothing," she says. "I didn't know what to do."

As an adult, Brandt says she's amazed by the number of people who share with her their own stories of childhood food insecurity. "Rather than sheltering your children from this sad fact of American life, talking to them about it can help nurture their compassion and empathy," she says. "And there's plenty they can do to help, from making posters to raise awareness, to organizing a food drive at school."

- Taking action teaches children that they do have the power and ability to change the world for the better.

- Don't make childhood hunger a political issue. Of course, childhood hunger doesn't exist in a vacuum; issues like welfare, minimum wage, income inequality and access to health care – all of which are heavily politicized – surround the problem.

Volunteer with your family at a shelter or food pantry during the busy holiday season. While serving or cooking food for a holiday-themed meal at a shelter during Thanksgiving or Christmas does not solve the larger problem, it will affect every person whose life you touch that day. Your efforts and kind words can become a fond, lifelong memory for a child, or remind adults that others care and they're not alone.

Lois Brandt is a children's fiction writer whose work has appeared in Highlights and other fine children's magazines. Her new book "Maddi's Fridge," (www. MaddisFridge.com), illustrated by Vin Vogel, is the first picture book to address child hunger in the United States. It was inspired by Brandt's childhood memory of opening her friend's refrigerator and finding only condiments and a lunch milk carton her friend had saved from school for her little brother. Ten percent of proceeds from sales of "Maddi's Fridge" go to hunger solutions. Brandt, who holds an MFA from Northwest Institute of Literary Arts, served as a Peace Corps volunteer in West Africa.

Stories of Sweet Springs

By Beverly Thompson
CV&T Guest Columnist

In the early nineteen thirties we did not have a lot of families in the Sweet Springs Addition, but all that we were lucky enough to have were really nice. There were many diverse lifestyles, yet we all blended together and made up a peaceful and happy place to live and play. We had good neighbors that could be depended on to come out and help any of us who were in need at any given time. We lived quietly and did not have too much excitement except for relatively small day to day happenings.

One of our neighbors worked in the mysterious and highly respected world of crime prevention. He was the very epitaph of law and order and respectability. Sometimes when we could corner him when we saw him in his yard and beg and beg and beg he would tell us about his job of fighting crime and occasionally having to take the bad guys to jail. At times the stories hinged on the edge of creditability and we wondered if maybe he might be embellishing the truth but quickly disallowed the notion after seeing him in his impressive uniform and later on in action. When Mr. Price Cox put on his police uniform and strapped on his holster that housed his big gun and walked by the house on his way to work, in our eyes, he grew in statue and all of us knew that he was to be working solely with our safety in mind. We were so proud and thankful to have him for a neighbor. On day one of the men who lived several miles up the Sweet Lick Creek Road had a problem with the law and he decided to try to get home and hide before he got caught. He made the mistake of trying to leave the Irvine Police behind by way of the short cut over the John Lisle hillside which is now known as Court Street and through Sweet Springs. He seemed to come out of nowhere and went through some of our yards with our very own policeman in hot pursuit. We were all frozen with fear and stood in awe as Mr. Cox tackled him and lead him back to town in the biggest pair of hand cuffs that we had ever seem. For the rest of that day we all talked about the pursuit and we all offered up our own version of what happened. By the next day our Mr. Price Cox was recognized as the Number 1 crime fighter of all time and standing proudly shoulder to shoulder with none other than Dick Tracy. We had our own local crime fighter extraordinaire to protect us. These are the memories that children cling too. In our opinion there would never be another policeman that would be able to even come close to our very own neighbor.

I loved to visit Mrs. Cox and her daughter, Mildred. They had all kinds of things to put on your face and make you look like a different person. They would see me coming and they would get out their wonderful creams and powders which they called cosmetics. After sitting on a tall stool they would work their magic before letting me go home. When they let me look in the mirror they would tell me that I was beautiful but I thought to myself that I looked just like a clown. One day daddy came home from work early and I ran home for him to see me in all my make-up. He took one look at me and asked mother where his little girl was. I ran up to him and said. "Here I am daddy, Here I am". He looked back at mother again and asked where his little girl was. When I heard those words I knew what I had to do. I ran to the bathroom and scrubbed my face until it was clean and then ran back. When I got back in the room where my daddy was he immediately knew who I was and he picked me up and hugged me and said he thought he had lost his little girl. I was so happy and I knew that I could not take a chance like that ever again so I had to tell Mildred and her mother that I could not wear any more of their make-up. It was a terrible thought that my daddy thought I was gone. I loved my daddy too much to ever scare him like that again.

Walter was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Cox. He had a big dog. I mean a great big dog. If I walked very carefully and very slowly I was safe but if I dared to walk too fast or heaven forbid to run then I was destined to be attacked from behind and end up on the ground. This monster dog did not have a mean bone in his body but he loved to play and any sudden movement meant that you were there to play with him. His description of playing was rolling his toy over and over. The more you screamed the more excited he became. Your only hope was to lay as still as possible and not make a sound until Walter spoke the magic words and you were allowed to get up. I loved every animal that I could get my hands on. He never scared me, but he did get my attention. I knew that the slightest movement would put him in play mode again and once a day was enough.

On a warm August day we had to see a sad thing happen. At the entrance to our street the neighbor's dog staggered out in the middle of the road. Luckily another neighbor saw it and called out to all of us who were playing to go inside immediately. One of our friend's dogs had contracted rabies. There was no cure and no hope for this sweet animal that we had all played with and loved on a times. Every animal and every child played together so a tragedy like this was a sad thing to each and every one of us. Our wonderful policeman and friend had to do his duty and destroy him. He did his job but it was done with a heavy heart. None of us chose to go back out and play the rest of the day. This was a time of mourning for our friend who had trailed us through the woods and had kept us safe from snakes and others unknowns. Today we would mourn for a lost friend.

Our veterans: Honoring those who served

Specialist 4 Walter Benjamin Eltzroth, Jr.

Although my older brother, Ben, was never an official resident of Estill County, I felt he too deserved some recognition for his military service to our country. He may have never received recognition for anything else in his life.

Ben tried to join the Army after high school graduation and was rejected. That was just prior to the Vietnam eruption. Within a few months the Army changed their mind and drafted him. Ben went through basic training at Ft. Knox about 6 months before I was drafted. After basic, the Army felt he was best suited for radio school. Besides learning how to operate military radios, he had to memorize Morse code. I would be hard pressed to master that skill. After this AIT-Advanced Individual Training he was assigned to Germany. I do not know what happened to the radio training because he told me he drove tractor-trailer rigs in Germany and all over Europe. Regardless of the training you received, the Army would assign you to where they felt they needed you the most. His outfit's home base was in the mountains near Baumholder, Germany. Ben said, "It was the coldest place on earth!"

After 2 years of service Ben was honorably discharged and returned home to Dayton, Ohio. It was his first trip home in nearly 18 months. The Army had an effect on Ben—not a good one. I never knew Ben to ever drink alcohol prior to serving in the Army. He came home with an alcohol problem that followed him throughout his life.

Ben soon married, fathered 2 sons and had a good job at McCall's Printing Plant in Dayton. After his divorce Ben moved back home with our mother. His drinking problem soon caused him to lose his job and several more. As long as Mom was supervising, Ben seemed to weather the storms caused by his alcohol addiction.

In 1990 our mother passed away. Despite the efforts of my brother, Mike; my sister, Terry; and I, Ben's downward spiral seemed to accelerate. Before long he was living at the Salvation Army shelter in Dayton. They rejected him because his of drinking problem and he began living as a homeless person on the streets of downtown Dayton.

In September of 1998 I received the call I had been expecting for years. The Dayton Police had found Ben's body in an abandoned retail tire store. Apparently the owner of the building had found that someone had been entering the building and re-secured the entrance. When Ben could not get inside he broke a window to gain access. In doing so he cut his arm. He was probably intoxicated, laid down on his pallet and bled to death. At the age of 52 he had $2 to his name.

At first it seemed my brother, sister and I would have to share Ben's funeral expenses. Since Ben was a veteran we contacted the Dayton Veteran's Administration Center. The VA was very helpful. They provided the embalming, a casket, their chaplain provided a beautiful service for the family, and they buried Ben in the National Cemetery in Dayton. Ben is at rest within sight of our father who was a WWII Veteran. On my next visit to Ben's final resting place I observed his grave marker for the first time. It stated 'Vietnam'. The VA officials told me that although he served in Germany he is considered a 'Vietnam era' veteran.

Ben was an easy going, gentle-natured person. If anyone ever needed a hand he was always there to help. Ben was easily taken advantage of by others which probably hastened his downfall. Although he was mentally challenged in some ways, he seemed to have spurts of genius in other areas. I am thankful our mother did not live to learn the details of his death. It would have broken her heart.

Radioman 1st Class 'Doug' Chaney, U.S.Navy

Doug Chaney enlisted in the U.S. Navy in October 1976. His basic training took place at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center. After basic he received orders for training as a radioman in the Navy Training Center at San Diego, CA. There he was trained in the operation of radios, teletype and learned Morse code.

From October 1976 until being honorably discharged in February 1986, Doug served full-time and in the Naval Reserves. Some of the duty stations and ships where he served were: Azores Naval Air Station; Naval Facility at Argentina, Newfoundland; USS Biddle out of Norfolk, Virginia; Jacksonville, Florida Naval Air Station; and the USS Yosemite out of Mayport, Florida.

The USS Biddle was a guided missile cruiser. It was decommissioned in 1993. The USS Yosemite was a destroyer tender and repaired other ships. While Doug was assigned to the USS Yosemite he visited ports in the Mediterranean Sea and the Indian Ocean. The Indian Ocean cruise was for a medical mission. The USS Yosemite was decommissioned in 1994.

Doug was able to see many beautiful places in this world. He enjoyed the camaraderie aboard ship. Morale among his fellow service personnel seemed very low during President Carter's administration. It rebounded once the United States military and the whole country regained its national pride thanks to President Reagan's efforts.

Doug is Witt Springs-raised and still resides on part of his father and mother's farm. Many of you may know him as a rural mail carrier in Estill County.

Editor's Note: We are very fortunate to have Jerry Eltzroth writing a series of articles about some of our local veterans. The series will run throughout the month of November. We appreciate Jerry very much for his valuable contributions to our paper.

AMAC recommends seniors get moving for health

Get a move on

The older you get the more you find ways to avoid exercise, says the Association of Mature American Citizens. As one wag put it: the only exercise some people get is jumping to conclusions, running down their friends, side-stepping responsibility, and pushing their luck.

But the fact is, the older you get the more you need to exert yourself. You must overcome the inertia of aging and find ways of improving your heart rate and blood sugar levels by developing good exercise habits. Of course, it is important to check with your doctor before beginning any regimen that involves strenuous activities, says AMAC.

Exercise is particular good for fending off Type 2 Diabetes and other chronic conditions. In fact, the World Health Organization, which says that a healthy diet, increased physical activity and avoiding tobacco use can prevent 80% of premature heart disease, 80% of type 2 diabetes cases and 40% of cancers.

There's no excuse

Some of the excuses older folks have for not exercising are so far off the mark that they reveal a deep seated guilt about their sedentary lifestyles, according the Association of Mature American Citizens. "I'm not getting any younger," they'll say. But the fact is that a regimen of exercise will actually make you feel younger.

You don't have to run a marathon, but maybe you can get up out of that armchair and take a brisk walk, says AMAC. You'll be amazed at the benefits. We all know that exercise is good for your heart. But did you know that it can lower the risk of dementia and Alzheimer's disease.

Meanwhile, if you are suffering from a chronic illness that has you "grounded," there are special aerobic and stretching exercises you can do that can help improve muscle health.

Be sure to check with your physician before you start in on any exercise program. In fact, the doctor may have suggestions on what types of workouts would be best for you.

Association of Mature American Citizens finds some facts surprising

The gray divorcee

Harry Bidwell of East Sussex, U.K. set the record for the oldest individual to win a divorce from his wife in 1980. He was 101 years old; his wife was 65. A classic example of incompatibility, quipped the Association of Mature American Citizens.

But, according to AMAC, the perhaps oddest case of divorce among the nonagenarian-plus set was that of a Roman couple identified only as Antonio C. and Rosa C. by the Italian courts. It happened in 2011 after Antonio discovered love letters Rosa had written to her lover more than three score years earlier.

Notwithstanding their ages, their nearly 80 years of marriage, their five children, one dozen grandchildren and one great-grand child ages and their ages - he was 99 and she was 96 - Antonio could not forgive Rosa's infidelity.

"It must have been an affair too hot to cool down if she kept those letters for all those years," commented one wag.

A 'curious' discovery

Curiosity may have killed the cat, but can it improve the mental acuity of seniors, asks the Association of Mature American Citizens.

One scientific journal, Neuron, reports that our natural interest in a topic may stimulate our memory, particularly as we grow older. Test participants "showed improved memory for information that they were curious about and for incidental material learned during states of high curiosity," researchers concluded.

Another article published in the American Medical Association's journal, Neurology, recently reported that what it calls "intellectual enrichment" can fend off the onset of dementia for as much as nine years as we grow older. In other words, the more you seek opportunities to learn and stimulate your brain, the more likely you are to improve brain function, particularly as it relates to memory.

The world is getting older

A new report by Global AgeWatch, which focuses on the wellbeing of older people around the world, ranks Norway and Sweden as the best places to live out your old age; the United States came in at eighth place, just after Iceland. Not surprisingly Afghanistan is the last place on Earth that the elderly would want to call home.

The research showed that "economic growth alone will not improve older people's wellbeing and specific policies need to be put in place to address the implications of ageing."

"The unprecedented rate and speed of population ageing [globally] presents policy makers with a challenge," said Toby Porter, Chief Executive of HelpAge International. "Only if they act now will they have a chance to meet the needs of their citizens and keep their economies going."

The Association of Mature American Citizens noted that the U.S. population is growing older at a fast pace and that America's elderly are, perhaps, more engaged in the political process than anywhere else in the world. Thus, they are in a better position to influence policies that impact the lifestyles of senior citizens.

Raven Kerby, treasurer, and Whitney Ferrell, secretary, accepted funds for the local chapter from the State's AG TAG program, which comes from those who register their KY Farm License Plates and make a voluntary $10 donation.

Comissionioner of Agriculuture James Comer says Ag Tag to benefit 4-H, FFA, and KY Proud

Kentucky Commissioner of Agriculture James Comer has pioneered the Kentucky Farm license plate program, adding a direct benefit for Kentucky FFA and 4-H. When a person purchases a Kentucky Farm License plate, they have the opportunity to donate $10 which is divided equally between Kentucky FFA, Kentucky 4-H and Kentucky proud.

The FFA share for this fiscal year ending June 30, 2014 was 169,280.21, a 51,206.88 increase from 2012, the first year of the program. The Kentucky FFA foundation distributes half of the funds generated from a county back to FFA chapters in that county. The half retained by the Kentucky FFA Foundation is used to support a variety of state level programs.

“When Kentucky farmers renew their license plates, they can add a voluntary $10 donation that will be split evenly among these three fine organizations,” said Commissioner Comer, a former state FFA president . “FFA and 4-H give Kentucky’s young people opportunities to participate in constructive activities while they learn the value of hard work and discipline. Kentucky Proud helps Kentucky producers find new markets for their products. All three programs are vital to the future of Kentucky agriculture and Kentucky as a whole.”

In Estill county,21.97% of those purchasing farm plates are also making the $10 contribution. Kentucky FFA makes a positive difference in the lives of more than 14,500 students through premie leadership, personal growth, and career success through agriculture education, including those here in Estill county. If you are renewing your farm plates this year, we encourage you to show your support for the FFA and make $10 contribution.

Extreme cold stresses livestock

Winter is getting an early start this year. With blasts of arctic cold, farmers need to make sure their animals are ready for the assault. Cold temperatures and severe wind chills create dangerous conditions for livestock and outdoor pets.

Livestock producers should make sure animals have adequate shelter, water, dry bedding and feed to make it through cold weather conditions. UK livestock specialists note that animals have a higher requirement for energy in the colder months, so producers should have high-quality grains and forages on hand to meet their needs.

The average horse, with a lower activity level, should eat between 1.5 and 2 percent of its body weight in feed per day to maintain its weight. UK equine specialist Bob Coleman said that feed requirement goes up in the winter, as horses use more calories to keep warm. He recommends providing extra hay and making sure horses have shelter to get out of windy, damp weather. It’s also important for horses to have access to clean, unfrozen water. Make sure water sources are open for all livestock. A decrease in water intake will affect feed intake.

Ambient temperatures can impact the amount of dry matter cattle eat, providing an opportunity to compensate for increased maintenance energy needs. Producers either need to increase their animals’ feed intake or increase the energy density of the diet by feeding higher quality hay or adding more grain or fat to the grain mix, UK beef specialist Jeff Lehmkuhler said.

Lehmkuhler recommended that producers continue to monitor cows during the wintertime and make sure to maintain the animals’ body condition. “Poor quality hay may not provide adequate energy to maintain gestating cows that are entering the third trimester,” he said. “Consider having the hay tested to determine if you need to supplement during times of possible cold stress, especially for the enduring cold spells.” He said to consider separating younger and thinner cows that may not have the same internal insulation as conditioned older cows and supplement them accordingly or offer them higher quality forage if available. Coleman said equine owners can employ similar strategies and separate animals according to body condition score.

“Producers should move cows to fields with natural windbreaks or provide man-made windbreaks, which are not the same as a barn,” Lehmkuhler suggested. “Poorly managed barns combined with poor ventilation may actually hamper efforts to improve the environmental conditions. Lastly, remember it is energy or calories that are really needed. If the protein level in the forage is adequate, do not make supplement decisions based on protein level; rather purchase the most affordable calories. Stay warm and keep the waterers flowing.”For more information, contact the Estill County Extension office at 723-4557. Department of Agriculture announces contest “Kentucky Agriculture: Growing the Next Generation of Farmers” is the theme of the Kentucky Department of Agriculture’s 2015 Poster and Essay Contest.

“Kentucky’s young people are our future farmers, consumers, and citizens,” Agriculture Commissioner James Comer said. “It’s important for them to know where their food comes from and understand the effort, skill, and care it takes to produce it. This contest helps raise awareness of agriculture’s important role in our everyday lives, and it may even inspire some participating students to join the next generation of farmers.”

Students are asked to submit either a poster, an essay, or a digital image based on the contest theme. Statewide poster and essay winners from each grade, kindergarten through 12th, will be chosen, and an overall digital winner will be selected. Cash prizes will be presented to the winners in March at the Kentucky Agriculture Day Celebration, and their work will be displayed at next summer’s Kentucky State Fair.

Entries must be postmarked no later than Jan. 27. A completed entry form must be taped or glued to the back of each entry. The name of the teacher and school must accompany each entry. Winners will be notified on Feb. 20. The contest is conducted by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture in partnership with Kentucky Agriculture and Environment in the Classroom Inc.

For more information, including complete contest rules and entry forms, go to www.kyagr.com/agcontest or contact Agriculture Education Coordinator Jordan L. Spalding at (502) 782-4125 or jordan.spalding@ky.gov.

Chainsaw safety on the farm and at home

By Eric Baker
Estill Co. Extension Agent

While chainsaws are a powerful tool, this characteristic also makes them very dangerous. Improper use can cause serious, sometimes fatal, injuries, so if you're using a chainsaw, follow these three safety guidelines: know how your saw works and how to properly use it; wear personal protective equipment to protect your eyes, hearing, head, legs and feet and never work alone.

Buy a chainsaw you can comfortably handle and that is appropriate for the tasks you do most often. Always read and follow instructions in the owner's manual. Be sure all parts of your chainsaw are present and in good working order. Check the saw chain for proper tension and sharpness. Use a saw with a chain brake and low-kickback type of chain. Be sure the chain is well-lubricated and all safety devices, including the chain brake, are properly working.

Be sure to mix fuel in a can, not in the saw's tank and keep the gasoline can at least 10 feet away from where you're going to start the chainsaw.

Always start a chainsaw with the saw on the ground with one of your toes in the handle and one hand on the handle. Never hold the chainsaw in the air with one hand while pulling on the starting rope with the other.

Keep both hands on the chainsaw when cutting; always operate the saw below shoulder height; only operate a chainsaw up in a tree when you've received special training to do so, and engage the chain brake when starting and walking with the saw.

Many chainsaw injuries take place when the moving chain comes into contact with the operator, with kickback being the most common cause. Kickback takes place when the upper tip of the guide bar touches an object, or the chain gets pinched. This rapidly and uncontrollably throws the saw up and back towards the operator. Kickback can cause severe lacerations to the upper body, neck or face, and even death. Hand and arm injuries comprise 41 percent of total chainsaw injuries; legs, 39 percent; head and face injuries, 11 percent; feet, 6 percent and upper body, 3 percent.

Remember to maintain a stiff left elbow to lessen the chance of the saw striking you in a kickback. When cutting logs from a tree, be sure to stand to the left side of the chain so any kickback will go over your shoulder.

You can significantly reduce chainsaw injuries or fatalities by wearing personal protective equipment. Wear cut-retardant chaps and cut-resistant boots to protect thighs, shins and feet; goggles not sunglasses to protect eyes; ear plugs to protect hearing; non-slip gloves to protect hands; and a hardhat and face screen to protect your head and face. One convenient way to protect your head, face and ears is to use a helmet system that combines hardhat, face screen and hearing protection. Also, wear sturdy, snug fitting clothing that gives you complete freedom of movement. Avoid loose things that might catch in the moving chain including sleeve and pants cuffs, unfastened long hair or jewelry.

Never go out alone to operate a chainsaw. Another person can share the cutting tasks to prevent fatigue, a major cause of injuries in the woods, or go for help should an accident occur. Always take a first aid kit and keep it handy.

Remember, these safety features won't replace proper training, safe operating practices and common sense, but they will reduce your risk of an injury.

Study finds Tylenol and rest not best remedy for an aching back; movement, breathing and a strong body is the answer Tylenol and rest as a cure for back pain is a thing of the past, instead the preferred treatment is to keep moving, according to a news release from the Saint Louis University Medical Center.

Seventy-five percent of people experience at least one episode of back pain in their lifetime and Chris Sebelksi, DPT and associate professor of physical therapy and athletic training at Saint Louis University, says that researchers still struggle with understanding what causes it and how to treat it.

To add to this confusion, a study released earlier this year by Australian researchers found that acetaminophen, (brand name Tylenol) appears to make no difference in helping patients manage back pain, according to the release.

"It may be that acetaminophen helps but doesn't completely eliminate back pain, or it may work for some people and some injuries, but not others," Sebelksi said in the release. The answer is to "broaden our approach to include more than Tylenol and a few days rest."

America's sedentary lifestyle which often includes desk jobs, hours in front of a screen and lack of physical activity is a recipe for stiff muscles and achy backs.

"Instead of sitting at your desk for hours, change positions, stand for 20 minutes, or go for a walk and talk to someone. Movement will keep you healthy and allow you to adjust," Sebelksi said in the release.

And the level of movement doesn't have to be a huge time or energy commitment; "you don't have to join a gym," he said.

People with back pain should also work work on strengthening the whole body, Sebelksi says. Strong legs, limber hips and a strong trunk "will keep you from overtaxing lower back muscles to compensate for weakness elsewhere in the body."

Sebelksi also emphasizes the importance of breathing which surprisingly also strengthens groups of muscles within your trunk.

"Deep breathing really activates key muscles in your trunk," Sebelksi said. "Talk. Laugh out loud. Do cardio. Do yoga. Do things that force you to breathe. This will help your back stay healthy."

The best medicine for an aching back, says Sebelksi, is "active rest."

"There's no such thing as just 'rest,' Sebelksi said. "At rest, muscles weaken; moving builds strength. Think about it in terms of alternating movement and active rest.

"Even after an injury, while you don't put yourself at risk by pushing yourself too hard before you're ready, you also don't just go to bed. You do what you can do. Even something as simple as walking offers significant benefits."

New 2014 Farm Bill Safety Net Programs began Nov. 17; Producers have until March 31, 2015, to choose the program best for their operation

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) reminds farm owners and producers that the opportunity to choose between the new 2014 Farm Bill established programs, Agricultural Risk Coverage (ARC) and Price Loss Coverage (PLC), begins Nov. 17, 2014, and continues through March 31, 2015.

The new programs, designed to help producers better manage risk, usher in one of the most significant reforms to U.S. farm programs in decades.

"USDA is committed to keeping farm owners and producers well informed on all steps in this process to ensure that they have all of the information that they need before making their coverage choice," said Farm Service Agency Administrator Val Dolcini. "The new ARC and PLC programs provide a more rational approach to helping farmers manage risk by ensuring families don't lose the farm because of events beyond their control."

USDA helped create online tools to assist in the decision process, allowing farm owners and producers to enter information about their operation and see projections that show what ARC and/or PLC will mean for them under possible future scenarios. Farm owners and producers can access the online resources, available at www.fsa.usda.gov/arc-plc, from the convenience of their home computer or mobile device at any time.

"In addition to the new online tools, USDA has done extensive outreach, including partnering with State Cooperative Extension Services to hold meetings and meet with farm owners and producers," said Dolcini. "USDA leaders will continue visiting with farm owners and producers to share information and answer questions the new programs. We want to help producers boil the information down, understand their options and make the best decision on which program – ARC or PLC – is right for them."

Covered commodities include barley, canola, large and small chickpeas, corn, crambe, flaxseed, grain sorghum, lentils, mustard seed, oats, peanuts, dry peas, rapeseed, long grain rice, medium grain rice (which includes short grain rice), safflower seed, sesame, soybeans, sunflower seed and wheat. Upland cotton is no longer a covered commodity.

Dates associated with ARC and PLC that farm owners and producers need to know:

Now through Feb. 27, 2015: Farm owners may visit their local Farm Service Agency office to update yield history and/or reallocate base acres.

Nov. 17, 2014 to March 31, 2015: Producers make a one-time election between ARC and PLC for the 2014 through 2018 crop years.

Mid-April 2015 through summer 2015: Producers sign contracts for 2014 and 2015 crop years.

October 2015: Payments issued for 2014 crop year, if needed.

Now through Feb. 27, 2015 Nov. 17, 2014, to March 31, 2015

Mid-April through Summer 2015

October 2015 Farm owners make base reallocation/yield updates

Producers make election between ARC/PLC

Producers sign contracts for 2014 and 2015 crop years

Payments issued for 2014 crop year, if needed

To learn more about which safety net options are most appropriate for specific farming operations, farmers can use new Web tools at www.fsa.usda.gov/arc-plc, which can be accessed from the convenience of a home computer or a mobile device at any time. To learn more about upcoming educational meetings, farmers can contact their local Farm Service Agency county office at <http://go.usa.gov/pYV3>.

Venison stew can be a great addition to your recipe box

Megan Parker
Columnist

Venison has always been one of my favorite meats. It's one of the leanest and most versatile to use in substituting it in many different recipes. Growing up my dad would always send his deer to the Mennonites and made into summer sausage. Mmm! My husband, however, processes his own. Roast, backstrap, hamburger, stew meat, steaks... I could keep going. A lot of the times I'll make a venison roast, then use the leftovers to make barbecue. We love backstrap wrapped in bacon and then simmered in brown gravy. If there's one thing that my husband can cook, it's venison (and fish, he can fry some wonderful fish). One of his favorites this time of year is venison stew. Since we had some this past weekend, I've decided to share with you his recipe. We've made various changes to the recipe over the past few years, and finally I think we've got it down pat!

- Ingredients
- 4 large or 6 small red skin potatoes, cubed
 - 2 cups of sliced carrots
 - 1 onion, cut into chunks
 - 1 (32oz) box of beef broth
 - 4-5 cups of water
 - 3 beef bouillon cubes
 - 1 tablespoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon black pepper
 - 1 teaspoon of Creole Seasoning
 - 3 heaping tablespoons of red currant jelly
 - 1 1/2 pounds cubed venison (the roast works for this well)
 - 1 to 2 tablespoons of

A few basic ingredients, many you may already have on hand, red skin potatoes, chopped carrots and a sweet onion, add so much flavor to this simple stew.

jalapeño juice (I also add in one or two sliced jalapeños, depends on your heat preference)

- 1 clove of minced garlic
- 3/4 c. seasoned flour (Wisenerberger or Kentucky Colonels works well)

Into a large slow cooker add broth, water, red currant jelly, bouillon cubes, salt, pepper, creole seasoning and jalapeño juice. Stir until dissolved. Next add in your vegetables and venison. Set the slow cooker on low and cook for 7-8 hours or on high for 4-5 hours. A few minutes before serving, mix your season flour with 1/4 cup water until dissolved*. Pour into stew and cook until you get the desired thickness. (*Hint: Pour a small amount of season flour into a separate bowl and use the hot stew liquid. Mix until almost like a thick cream before you

My husband is not a trophy hunter, but he just happened upon this large buck a few years past and it made many a meals in our home. Not to mention the fact that it now graces our living wall to his delight.

place in your slow cooker. If not, you'll have seasoned dumplings in your stew. Trust me on this!) Now, in my house we love this stew with either homemade buttermilk biscuits or cornbread. This meal will feed about four, depending on who you are feeding!

I hope that you enjoy this meal as much as my family does, and I would love for some of you to share your venison and wild meat recipes. As the wife of a hunter and fisherman, I'm always on the search for new recipes to try.

Kroger adds 125 Kentucky Proud products in 88 stores throughout the commonwealth

Dozens of Kentucky family farms and small businesses will benefit from a historic partnership between Kentucky Proud and Kroger, Agriculture Commissioner James Comer announced today. Next to a Kentucky Proud display at the Springhurst Kroger supermarket on Brownsboro Road, Commissioner Comer said that Kroger will sell 125 products from 34 Kentucky Proud producers in 88 stores throughout Kentucky. Comer said the initial purchase filled a 10,000-square-foot warehouse and totaled $350,000, a record for a single transaction in the history of Kentucky Proud. "A purchase of this scope will make a big difference to these people," Commissioner Comer said. "Kroger has always carried a wide selection of local products, and we appreciate Kroger's continuing commitment to Kentucky Proud producers." "For decades Kentucky Kroger stores have offered a significant variety of locally sourced products, especially in our produce, meat and deli departments," said Tim McGurk, public affairs manager for Kroger's Louisville division. "But this week, thanks to tremendous support from the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, Kroger is taking the 'Buy Local' initiative to an entirely new level. We know that our shoppers will be thrilled to find all the new products from Kentucky farm families and local producers available in our stores." Commissioner Comer also used the occasion to introduce Kentucky Proud Popcorn, a premium popcorn product made from corn grown by western Kentucky farm families. The popcorn is processed by Preferred Popcorn, founded by Nebraska popcorn grower Norm Krug, which purchased a Murray, Ky., family's popcorn business and maintained connections to Kentucky growers. Fishmarket Seafood, a family-owned distributor in Louisville, will distribute the products to all 88 stores, which was instrumental to coordinating a product launch of this scope, Kroger officials said. At the Louisville event, Commissioner Comer showed two television commercials that will support the Kentucky Proud launch and video of a flyover of Weisenberger Mill in Midway. Featured guests on hand for the event included:

- * Bryan Kittleson, Scott Chapski, Penny Goddin, and Taryn Mynear of Kroger
- * Steve and Brad Smith of Fishmarket Seafood
- * Brian Churchill and Dave Roberts of Preferred Popcorn
- * Ben and Hannah Hornback of Manitou in Hopkins County, members of a farm family that grows Kentucky Proud Popcorn
- * Catrina Hill of Louisville, founder of Catrina's Kitchen, which makes seasoned mixes

- * Amy Henson and Wes McFadden of Laurel County, makers of Rock Bottom Goat's Milk Soap

The event followed a similar announcement Thursday at the Bates Creek Kroger in Lexington. November is National Diabetes Awareness Month

November is National Diabetes Awareness Month. That's why the Kentucky Optometric Association is reminding people that an annual eye exam is important for detecting eye diseases that diabetics are more likely to develop. Diabetes interferes with the body's ability to use and store sugar, which can cause damage throughout the body, including the eyes. Over time, diabetes affects the circulation system of the retina, which is the light-sensitive lining at the back of the eye. With an estimated 10 percent of Kentuckians having diabetes, regular dilated eye exams are critical to prevent vision loss, according to Dr. Joseph Cory Bastin, an optometrist in Hopkinsville, Ky. "All too often, eye problems show no symptoms until they are in an advanced stage, and that's why we recommend that people with diabetes in particular have an eye examination by a doctor of optometry at least once a year," Bastin said. "When the eyes are dilated, an eye doctor is able to examine the retina for signs of diabetic eye disease and prescribe a course of treatment to help preserve an individual's sight." People with diabetes are at a significantly higher risk for developing eye diseases including glaucoma, cataracts and diabetic retinopathy, one of the most serious sight-threatening complications of diabetes. Diabetics are 40 percent more likely to suffer from glaucoma than people without diabetes and 60 percent more likely to get cataracts. People with diabetes also tend to get cataracts at a younger age and have them progress faster. Diabetic retinopathy is a condition that causes progressive damage to the retina. Damage to the tiny blood vessels that nourish the retina causes swelling of retinal tissue and clouding of vision. If left untreated, diabetic retinopathy may lead to blindness.

Since early warning signs of diabetic eye and vision disorders are often subtle or undetected, the Kentucky Optometric Association recommends that high-risk individuals look for initial signs and contact a doctor of optometry if any of the following symptoms are present:

- Sudden blurred or double vision
- Trouble reading or focusing on near-work
- Eye pain or pressure
- A noticeable aura or dark ring around lights or illuminated objects
- Visible dark spots in vision or images of flashing lights

"There also are several things people can do to help prevent or slow the development of diabetic eye disease, including eating a healthy diet that includes Omega 3s, fresh fruits and vegetables; exercising regularly, controlling high blood pressure, and avoiding alcohol and smoking," Bastin said. About the Kentucky Optometric Association: Doctors of optometry provide two-thirds of all primary eye care in the United States. They are highly qualified, trained doctors on the frontline of eye and vision care who examine, diagnose, treat and manage diseases and disorders of the eye. In addition to providing eye and vision care, optometrists play a major role in a patient's overall health and well-being by detecting systemic diseases such as diabetes and hypertension.

Laundry detergent pods are sending hundreds of small children to the hospital every year; better to use traditional detergent

By Melissa Patrick

Laundry detergent pods, a convenience product that can be tossed into washing machines without having to measure out a liquid or powder, caused more than 700 children to be hospitalized in 2012-2013, with one confirmed death, according to a new study from Nationwide Children's Hospital. The study, published online in the journal Pediatrics, evaluated U.S. poison-control data from 2012 to 2013 and found 17,230 reports of children younger than six who had been injured from the laundry pods. That is nearly one child every hour, says the news release. Two-thirds of the cases were one- and two year-olds, with most of the exposures reported due to ingestion. Because the pods are usually brightly colored, young children, who naturally explore their environments orally, put them in their mouths. The water-soluble covering on the pods is easily penetrated, allowing the concentrated detergent to be ingested. "Laundry detergent pods are small, colorful, and may look like candy or juice to a young child," Marcel J. Casavant, co-author of the study, said in the release. "It can take just a few seconds for children to grab them, break them open, and swallow the toxic chemicals they contain, or get the chemicals in their eyes." While some manufacturers of laundry detergent pods have changed packaging to make pods less attractive to children, many have not. "It is not clear that any laundry detergent pods currently available are truly child resistant; a national safety standard is needed to make sure that all pod makers adopt safer packaging and labeling," said Gary

Smith, the study's senior author. "Parents of young children should use traditional detergent instead of detergent pods." Parents and child caregivers can help children stay safe by following these tips:

- Use traditional laundry detergent, it is less toxic than the pods.
- Store laundry detergent pods up, away and out of sight - preferably in a locked cabinet.
- Close laundry detergent pod packages or containers and put away immediately after use.
- Put the national Poison Help Line number (1-800-222-1222) in your cell phone and post it near your home phones.

Estill High Varsity Cheerleaders State Bound Again

The Estill County High School Varsity Cheerleaders will be once again making a State appearance at the KHSAA High School State Cheerleading Competition. On Sunday, the team traveled to Letcher County Central High School for the 14th Region competition, competing in the Super Large division. After scores were tallied, Estill was the overall highest scoring team of the day, finishing ahead of Powell County, Perry County Central, Letcher County Central, Jenkins, Lee County, Owsley County, Hazard, and Knott County Central.

State competition is not new to this team. They have consistently qualified for State for the past 13 years, bringing home several State trophies over the years. The KHSAA State Cheerleading Competition will be held at the All-Tec Arena at the Kentucky Horse Park on Saturday, December 13.

Isfort receives Regional Scholarship

Kaylee Rae Isfort, daughter of John and Donna Isfort received the Mary Katherine Prater Scholarship Sunday at the Region 14 KHSAA Cheerleading competition. The award is named for a Region 14 cheerleader who was killed in an automobile accident 3 days after competing and bringing home a State trophy at a KAPOs competition several years ago. The award is based on academic achievement along with community and school involvement.

ECMS Cheerleaders win at competition

The Middle School Cheerleaders brought home a trophy of their own from a competition at Tates Creek High School this past Saturday.

Reservoir smallmouth bass don't mind the cold fronts

This is the fifth installment of a series of articles titled "Fall Fishing Festival" profiling the productive fishing on Kentucky's lakes, rivers and streams in fall.

A look at the surface of Lake Cumberland right after dawn reveals a big, calm lake. Although the old Cumberland River now lies under at least 100 feet of water throughout most of the lake, the old river is still churning.

Water quickly finds weakness as anyone with a leaky basement can attest. The water in that long flooded river channel wiggled and shimmied through the porous rock at the base of Wolf Creek Dam for decades, necessitating a drawdown and repair beginning in 2007 and ended last year.

During the drawdown, saplings, bushes and other vegetation sprouted on the former lake bottom. This vegetation is now submerged, providing habitat for young sport fish, food for baitfish and ambush cover for predator fish such as the burgeoning population of smallmouth bass in the lake.

Bruce Johnson, of Richmond, grew up fishing and exploring Lake Cumberland from the back of his grandfather's farm along the West Fork of Indian Creek. Last Saturday near Conley Bottom, he caught a 22-inch smallmouth bass, his largest ever.

"We were fishing live shiners on the bottom on a gently sloping bank with cover," Johnson said. "The bank had saplings on it from when the lake was down. The fish was really fat, it had gorged on shad."

John Williams, southeastern fishery district biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, said the lake now holds more smallmouths longer than 20 inches, the minimum length to qualify in Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's Trophy Fish Program.

"The drawdown put the smallmouths in close approximation with the baitfish," Williams explained. "They are in excellent condition now. I predict a boom for all black bass in the next few years in the lake."

Fall, winter and early spring are the best times to fish Lake Cumberland or any of Kentucky's other world class smallmouth lakes such as Laurel River Lake and Dale Hollow Lake. Some of the largest specimens in the world swim in these lakes.

Although Dale Hollow is one of the crown jewels of the smallmouth world, Williams said he would choose Laurel River Lake for smallmouth larger than 6 pounds. "We hear increasing reports of smallmouths in the 7-pound range coming from Laurel," he said. "It seems to improve each year."

Sloping banks, like the one that produced Johnson's fish, are the places to fish now with water temperatures on these lakes hovering around 60 degrees. Live alewives, shad or shiners bottom fished on a slip sinker rig with a 1/0 circle hook work well.

Bruce Johnson of Richmond holds a 22-inch smallmouth he caught last Saturday near Conley Bottom on Lake Cumberland. The cold winds of this past week usher in the reservoir smallmouth bass fishing season on Kentucky's world class smallmouth waters. Lake Cumberland, Laurel River Lake and Dale Hollow Lake hold some of largest smallmouth bass in the world.

Shiners rigged through the nose on a size 1 octopus style hook and cast onto these banks produces many fish. Place two BB-sized split shots about 18 inches above the hook.

Circle hooks are fine for still fishing, but for casting live bait, the octopus style hook works much better.

Long sloping points also hold big smallmouth bass in fall and winter on these lakes. Trophy smallmouth suspend over these points, waiting for schools of shad or alewives to cruise by and provide dinner.

column. Points formed by a creek or the old river channel are best.

Retrieve the lure with a slow and steady cadence until you feel little pecks and nips from small fish. Count the lure down a little deeper and retrieve in the same manner. Eventually, you will hit the zone of actively feeding smallmouths.

This method produces large smallmouths in late fall and early winter. You can repeat this pattern throughout the lake on similar points.

On Laurel River Lake, the sloping banks and extended points around Hightop Boat Ramp in the Laurel River arm of the lake, in the lower sections of Spruce Creek and the long points near the dam are all excellent places to try.

Williams and crew sampled some nice smallmouths in the Illwill Creek arm of Dale Hollow Lake recently. The sloping banks and points in lower sections of Illwill and the Wolf Creek arm hold smallmouth bass as do the channel points near Phillips Bottom.

Any sloping bank or extended point on Lake Cumberland from Fishing Creek to the dam produces smallmouth bass in late fall.

Fishtrap Lake in Pike County is a sleeper smallmouth bass lake with an improving population of fish up to 22 inches. The lake undergoes a severe drawdown in fall, making the lower section of the lake from Hurricane Creek down to the dam the best section to fish during the cold months.

Don't let the fall winds get you down. They are blowing in the reservoir smallmouth season.

Author Lee McClellan is a nationally award-winning associate editor for Kentucky Afield magazine, the official publication of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. He is a life-long hunter and angler, with a passion for smallmouth bass fishing.

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources manages, regulates, enforces and promotes responsible use of all fish and wildlife species, their habitats, public wildlife areas and waterways for the benefit of those resources and for public enjoyment. Parker House rolls

submitted by Hannah Eaton

- 1 (1/4-ounce) envelope active dry yeast
- 2 cups warm water
- 6 cups bread flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 cup shortening (I use softened butter)
- 2 large eggs, lightly beaten
- 1/2 cup butter, melted, for brushing tops

Stir together yeast and warm water in a medium bowl; let stand 5 minutes. Stir together flour, sugar, and salt in a large bowl. Cut shortening into flour mixture with a pastry blender until crumbly; stir in yeast mixture and eggs just until blended. (Do not overmix.)

Cover and chill 8 hours.

Roll dough to 1/4 inch thickness on a well-floured surface (dough will be soft); cut with a 2 1/2 inch round cutter.

Brush rounds with butter. Fold in the rounds in half and place the rolls onto a greased jelly-roll pan with sides touching. Cover and let rise in a warm place, free from drafts, 45 minutes or until doubled in bulk.

Bake at 400 for 14 minutes or until golden. Brush tops with remaining butter. Yields 4 1/2 dozen.

Editor's note: These rolls are a favorite with my family. They are especially good with ham and turkey.

Cookbook also a guide to eateries across state

By LISA BICKNELL

CV&T News Editor

For those who always have room for another cookbook in their collection, this one has several appealing themes.

Think Kentucky, back roads, restaurants, and recipes. Now, how could you possibly go wrong with a combination like that?

Filled with colorful pictures of tempting dishes and recipes to create them, as well as photos of the places where they are created, Kentucky Back Road Restaurant Recipes: A Cookbook and Restaurant Guide" even features The Twin, a local walk-up restaurant.

If you've ever wondered what goes into the cake used in The Twin's famous hot fudge cake, you can find the recipe in this book.

Anita Musgrove, the book's author, writes in the preface, "I like traveling back roads with no particular place to be and no certain time to be there."

In the process of exploring, she has put together a book that is part travel guide, part restaurant directory and part cookbook.

Each eatery is described briefly, and most are accompanied by a recipe and photo.

Some of the recipes are "restaurant recipes," which means they are proportioned to feed a crowd. One of included in the book is enough to make it interesting, with names like Coon Dog Inn Restaurant located in Fredonia, Kentucky.

There's a page devoted to the Jefferson Davis Memorial, as well as a Jefferson Davis pie.

Not only are there fancier restaurants featured from the cities of Lexington and Louisville, but there are unassuming family restaurants in small towns that have been in business for years.

I would like to have seen a map included in the book with the featured restaurants marked on it. I'm sure they wouldn't be hard to look up, but a map would have been handy.

In the guide, the state is divided into four regions for culinary exploration. Locals might never have heard of many of the ones in the far-western part of the state, but there are some familiar names, including the Paddy Wagon in Richmond, R.T.'s, Hangers, The Red River Rockhouse in Campton and Kathy's Country Kitchen in Clay City.

For the person who likes to find interesting new places to eat or new recipes to try, this book would make a great Christmas gift.

An Encouraging Word: We owe a debt

By Howard Coop

Three hundred ninety four years ago, the MAYFLOWER, after a stormy voyage across the Atlantic, anchored in what is now Provincetown Harbor at the northern tip of Cape Cod. That was a great distance north of the Virginia Colony, its original destination.

One hundred one Pilgrims who were fleeing religious persecution in England were aboard the MAYFLOWER. Recognizing that they were out of English territory, those Pilgrims decided that they “would use their own liberty; for none had the power to command them.”

That decision led to the Mayflower Compact that was signed onboard the MAYFLOWER on November 11, 1620. Since the Julian calendar was the official calendar of England until 1752 when the Gregorian calendar was adopted there was a difference of 10 days in the two calendars, so the date of the signing, according to today’s calendar, was November 21, 1620.

The Mayflower Compact is a short document. “We, whose names are underwritten,...solemnly and mutually, in the presence of God, and one another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic.” That union was for a purpose: “For our better ordering, and preservation and furtherance of the ends aforesaid; and by virtue hereof to enact, constitute, and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions, and offices, from time to time, as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the colony; unto which we promise all due submission and obedience.” This action was undertaken “for the glory of God, and advancement of the Christian faith.”

That document, consisting of 195 words, was not a constitution, but it was the first governing document of the Plymouth Colony. Charles Francis Potter called it “one of the most important documents not only of American history but of the long struggle of mankind toward free institutions.”

The influence of the document is significant. “We, whose names are underwritten” became “We the people” to frame the constitution of the United States, and the desire of the pilgrims to escape religious persecution found expression in the first article of the Bill of Rights, the first amendment to the Constitution. That article emphatically says, “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.”

We owe a tremendous debt to those Pilgrims.

ADAM H. EDELEN
AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

The Honorable Wallace Taylor, Estill County Judge/Executive
 The Honorable Gary Freeman, Estill County Sheriff
 Members of the Estill County Fiscal Court

Independent Auditor's Report

Report on the Financial Statement
 Our responsibility is to express an opinion on the financial statement based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America, the standards applicable to financial audits contained in Government Auditing Standards issued by the Comptroller General of the United States, and the Audit Guide for County Fee Officials issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts, Commonwealth of Kentucky. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statement is free from material misstatement. An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statement. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statement, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statement in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. Accordingly, we express no such opinion. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of significant accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statement. We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinions.

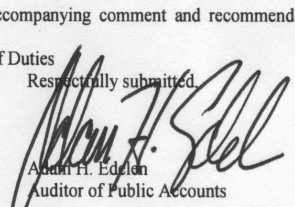

Basis for Adverse Opinion on U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles
 As described in Note 1 of the financial statement, the financial statement is prepared by the County Sheriff on the basis of the accounting practices prescribed or permitted by the laws of Kentucky to demonstrate compliance with the Commonwealth of Kentucky's regulatory basis of accounting, which is a basis of accounting other than accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America. The effects on the financial statement of the variances between the regulatory basis of accounting described in Note 1 and accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America, although not reasonably determinable, are presumed to be material.

Adverse Opinion on U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles
 In our opinion, because of the significance of the matter discussed in the Basis for Adverse Opinion on U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles paragraph, the financial statement referred to above does not present fairly, in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America, the financial position of each fund of the County Sheriff, as of December 31, 2013, or changes in financial position or cash flows thereof for the year then ended.

Opinion on Regulatory Basis of Accounting
 In our opinion, the financial statement referred to above presents fairly, in all material respects, the revenues, expenditures, and excess fees of the County Sheriff for the year ended December 31, 2013, in accordance with the basis of accounting practices prescribed or permitted by the Commonwealth of Kentucky as described in Note 1.

Other Reporting Required by Government Auditing Standards
 In accordance with Government Auditing Standards, we have also issued our report dated July 10, 2014 on our consideration of the Estill County Sheriff's internal control over financial reporting and on our tests of its compliance with certain provisions of laws, regulations, contracts and grant agreements, and other matters. The purpose of that report is solely to describe the scope of our testing of internal control over financial reporting and compliance and the results of that testing, and not to provide an opinion on the effectiveness of the Estill County Sheriff's internal control over financial reporting or on compliance. This report is an integral part of an audit performed in accordance with Government Auditing Standards in considering the entity's internal control over financial reporting and compliance.

Based on the results of our audit, we have presented the accompanying comment and recommendation, included herein, which discusses the following report comment:

Woody and Chloe: ‘We’re All Ears’

Chapter 10

“OK, Chloe,” I said, giving my best pep talk as we waited to be called onstage to perform our song and dance. “It’s the moment of truth. Remember, whatever happens, we did our best.”

“Contestant number 27,” we heard the announcer say. Chloe and I walked onstage and looked at the three judges. One judge was the governor of Kentucky, another was a cute blond girl who’d starred in several movies, and the third judge was a local guy from the electric company. We sang a medley of folk songs. We started with Hot Corn, Cold Corn, then transitioned into Big Rock Candy Mountain, and finished off with Honey in the Rock. Since Dad had bought me a contraption that held the harmonica to my mouth, I was able to sing, play the harmonica and the dulcimer at the same time while Chloe clogged.

I kept a groovin’ rhythm going, making sure the beat was not too fast or not too slow. In camp we learned that even while we are playing music, we must listen. Chloe listened carefully and clogged perfectly to the beat. The judges had smiles on their faces, and I saw the guy from the electric company tapping his feet and trying to stay in rhythm with us! As we held out the last note on the harmonica and dulcimer, the audience gave us a rousing ovation. We even heard a deep voice in the back yell “encore!”

Soon all of the contestants stood onstage waiting for the judges to tally the results. As I waited for the emcee to announce the Craftiest Kentuckian grand champion, I thought about the past several weeks. Oddly enough, a man we first misjudged as a burglar who was stealing ended up being a generous man who gave us so much.

“Ladies, gentlemen, we have a winner for the 2014 Craftiest Kentuckian grand champion.” The crowd cheered. “Honorable mention goes to ...”

Thanks to Mr. B., we had learned about the rich ancestry of Kentucky. We now understood how immigrants from Scotland, Ireland, Germany and England settled in the Appalachian Mountains of Kentucky. Life was much harder for them than it is for us now. While I had everything I needed, these folks didn’t even have necessities like brooms. They had to use the resources from Mother Nature to create those necessities -- and not only did they make them useful, they made them beautiful. Those beautiful and useful creations are now our treasured folk art.

“The Craftiest Kentuckian Third-Place Award goes to ...”

More than anything, I was so thankful our ancestors loved and cared for the stories, music, art, medicine, hobbies and traditions so much that they made sure to pass them down through generations for hundreds of years. I was going to do my part to make sure they continued to be passed down.

“The Craftiest Kentuckian Second-Place Award goes to ...”

Still, I couldn’t put my finger on one specific thing that made Kentucky so special. And then it came to me. Too excited to wait and tell Chloe after the awards, I whispered to her as we stood on stage. “Chloe, it isn’t one thing that makes Kentucky so special, it’s many things. It’s the different regions, the different landscape, the different dialect and different talents. It’s our resources, our traditions, and most of all it’s our people -- people who love Kentucky and are proud of its history and heritage. It’s the people who give back to Kentucky since Kentucky’s given so much to them.”

“And now for the grand prize. The winner will be invited to the Governor’s Mansion, preside as grand marshal of the state parade, be an honored guest at the Kentucky Derby, and receive two nights at a Kentucky state park. Ladies and gentlemen, the 2014 Craftiest Kentuckian grand champion is ...”

“I am so proud to be part of the rich tradition and heritage of Kentucky. Aren’t you, Chloe? Just thinking about it gives me goose bumps.”

Obviously I was whispering too loud because the emcee said, “Contestant number 27, have you heard a word I’ve spoken?”

There were chuckles from the entire room. I looked at Chloe and she smiled. Embarrassed, I cleared my throat and said, “No, sir. I’m sorry. I was just thinking about our state and telling my sister how proud I am to be a Kentuckian.”

“That’s very nice, son, but do you think you could stop talking for a moment while I announce the grand champion for the second time?” the emcee asked as he winked and smiled. “Are you two ready to listen?”

“Yes, sir,” I said proudly. “We’re all ears!”

Thanks for reading the 2014 newspaper chapter story. We hope you collected each chapter and made the We’re All Ears book to read over and over. We hope you enjoyed learning about our state as much as we did. ~ Woody and Chloe

Author-artist visits Pre-K Center

Students learn about other cultures

Photos and story submitted by Amy Noland-Hughes

Thomas Freese, storyteller, author and artist, visited South Irvine P-K Kindergarten students for 3 days. Mr. Freese taught the students some Spanish, did several art projects , told many stories and sang many songs from around the world. His visit was paid for through a World Language-Arts Integration Grant from the Kentucky Department of Education and the Kentucky Center for the Performing Arts.

This grant provides funds to integrate the arts with a World Language. South Irvine selected Spanish as their World Language focus. Through this same grant, the Kindergarten students also attended the play SkippyJon Jones at ECU Center for the Arts. They learned the elements of drama and many Spanish words as well. For many students, this was their first live theater performance.

Local girl donates hair to “Locks of Love “

submitted by Christy Crowe

Jadelyn Neal recently had several inches of her hair cut off by Christy Crowe at Looking Fancy. She will donate it to “Locks of Love,” and the hair will be used to fashion a life-like wig for someone who has lost their hair because of chemotherapy treatments or other medical issues.

Jadelyn is the daughter of Barry & Melissa Neal and the granddaughter of Johnny & Joyce Neal.
